

Nobody Knows

By Ruby F D

Nobody knows what Leje knows. Nobody knows but she.

So Leje took me for a stroll and showed her world to me.

I met her by the dark green gate.

Then I followed her to a forest where we ate.

She told me roots of trees are where little pixies go to keep out of sight.

Leje knows birds flying past scare the butterflies in the morning light.

We came across the willow dome.

Leje knows that's the unicorn's home.

We climbed a bumpy tree. The wind scared past as it turned into night.

There we saw creatures sweep down on leaves with delight.

She told me sprites brush their hair with a magic comb.

Then a unicorn appeared to take us home.

I got back at midnight. I walked up to the buildings entrance door.

But when I turned to say thank you and goodbye, Leje was no more.

Nobody knows what Leje knows. Nobody knows it's true.

So let me take you for a stroll and I'll show her world to you.
